Goucher's College baseball team may have had an undefeated season last year, but will they continue their winning streak and be crown champions again for 2 years in a row?!

It's a very exciting springtime here in Baltimore. Baseball fans are eager with Major League Baseball starting up again last week, and Goucher's baseball team finishing up their spring training and preparing for their first games of the season.

The first home game of the season will be played at Camden Yards Stadium this Saturday at 1pm. Goucher Athletics has agreed to drive students down to the game at Camden Yards, to go support our undefeated sports team.

Goucher Baseball has set the bar high for our other sports as they anticipate to make it to the playoffs yet again. Last year the team started off with a 5 game winning streak, and continued undefeated all the way through to the final playoffs game where they won it all against the Catholic Cardinals with extra innings to determine the true champion for the 2023 season.

This season Goucher was ranked at No. 1 out of all teams in the Landmark Conference.

After an interview with team captain Chad Danforth he says, "This team has everything we got to make it again to the top this year."

Danforth also says “We are determined to be undefeated yet again this year. We just have to keep our head in the game.”

The game this weekend starts at 1pm with live broadcast streaming on Netflix.
